...agreed measure of 'extreme poverty'. The World Bank measure uses Purchasing Power Parity (PPP) US dollars to set the household income level below which people can be defined as living in extreme poverty. PPPs define the value of a dollar in relation to the cost of a set basket of goods and services and avoid problems of comparison between incomes in different currencies caused by exchange rate fluctuation and the differing costs of goods and services in different countries. Established in 1990 at an income of US$1 PPP per day, it has been revised on...
